

The OHIO
ALUMNUS

NOVEMBER, 1961

Vernon Roger Alden
Fifteenth President of Ohio University

ALMOST 17 years have passed since Mrs. Baker, our three girls and I came to Athens. They have been exciting and busy years and we never experienced one unhappy day during the entire period. The close cooperation and solid support of trustees, alumni, faculty, students and friends has made great progress possible in every phase of university life. My thanks to all of you.

As I came to the end of my administration, one concern occasionally flashed through my mind—who will come next—who will recognize the great future this university, our alumni, faculty, students and friends deserve?

On October 4, 1961, this question was clearly answered to my complete satisfaction when the trustees unanimously elected Dean Vernon R. Alden of Harvard University as the 15th president of this university. He is young and imaginative, his background is scholarly, his training and experience broad and rich. No better selection could have been made. I welcome President-elect Alden and his family, congratulate the trustees and their advisors and confidently predict a brilliant future both for Ohio University and the Aldens.

My sincere good wishes to all.

OHIO UNIVERSITY'S NEW PRESIDENT

Harvard's Vernon Roger Alden is selected by trustees as the fifteenth president of Ohio's oldest university

IN THE FALL of 1960, Ohio University's Board of Trustees set out on the monumental assignment of finding a successor to President John C. Baker. Working through a committee representing trustees, faculty and alumni, the board had a vital objective: Find a man capable of leading Ohio University into an era of education destined to bring unprecedented growth and responsibility to higher education in Ohio.

One year later board members had unanimously agreed on their choice. On October 4 they announced that the fifteenth president of Ohio University will be Dr. Vernon Roger Alden, associate dean of faculty at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Just 38 years old, Dean Alden will become the youngest Ohio University president since William Henry Scott was inaugurated, at the age of 32, in 1872.

Trustee Chairman Fred H. Johnson, who made the announcement, said the new president will take office as soon as arrangements can be made to relieve him from his present responsibilities. He speculated that this will be near the first of the year, and said that President Baker has agreed to remain until Dean Alden can actively assume the presidency.

Described by colleagues as a dynamic young leader with an intense interest in education, Vernon Alden has risen rapidly to his present position at Harvard. As associate dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration, he has been responsible for the general administration of the School, including financial operations. A graduate of the Harvard Business School, Dean Alden has worked there for the past ten years.

He also serves as associate director and trustee of the Institute for College and University Administrators, sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The Institute conducts case problem seminars for college presidents, academic deans, and trustees. One of the founding members of the Institute in 1953, Dean Alden has taught in annual seminars for more than 700 college administrators representing 500 colleges and universities.

His interest in international affairs is demonstrated by the fact that he has taught and served as educational director during the past two summers of Advanced Management Programs in Japan, which have been sponsored by Keio University in Tokyo and by Harvard.

His recent trip enabled him to visit educational institutions in Paris, Rome, Istanbul, Calcutta, Bangkok, Hong Kong, and Japan. He is a founding member of the Institute European d'Administration des Affaires in Paris. Dean Alden has also participated in educational programs in Mexico, Puerto Rico and the State of Hawaii.

Dean Alden has been the educational consultant to the Young Presidents' Organization, representing approximately 1800 business leaders in America. He serves on the boards of directors of several corporations, including the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, The Digital Equipment Corporation and the Ludlow Corporation.

He has been on the Advisory Committee of the Ford Foundation-sponsored Seminar on the Economics of Higher Education, a trustee of the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, a trustee of Sarah Lawrence College in New York, and the chairman of the Covenant Congregational Church in Waltham, Massachusetts. He is a member of the advisory board for the "Loeb Awards for Distinguished Reporting of Financial and Business News."

Glenview, Illinois; his brother, Burton, in Joliet, Illinois. His sister, Mrs. Frank Shinstrom, lives in Kirkland, Washington.

TRUSTEE ACTION in establishing a five-man committee last year represented the first time alumni have been officially represented on a committee for selection of an Ohio University president.

Members of the committee were: Gordon K. Bush, '24, publisher of the Athens Messenger and vice chairman of the OU Board of Trustees, committee chairman; Edgar Shoemaker, '26, officer and controller of the American Potash and Chemical Company, Los Angeles, California, and president of the OU Alumni Association; Edwin L. Kennedy, '27, partner in Lehman Brothers investment house, New York City, president of the board of directors of the OU Fund, Inc., and a university trustee; Dr. Amos C. Anderson, professor of psychology; and John W. Galbreath, '20, Columbus, nationally-known realtor, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball team, and a university trustee.

At the request of Dr. Anderson, the Faculty Advisory Council appointed a Faculty Committee to work with him, and through him, with the Trustees' Committee.

This Committee consisted of Dr. Elizabeth Andersch, professor of dramatic art and speech, chairman; Dr. Harry E. Benz, professor of education; Paul H. Black, professor of mechanical engineering; Dr. Harry B. Crewson, associate professor of economics; Dr. Raymond H. Gusteson, associate professor of government; and A. H. "Jack" Rhoads, associate professor of physical education and athletics.

In reviewing the work of the Faculty Committee, Dr. Anderson observed:

"Special credit is due Mrs. Paul H. Black who checked Who's Who in America and other biographical books for material on all persons whose names came to us, and prepared copies of pertinent data for all committee members.

"Several happy consequences emerged as a result of faculty participation in the search for and selection of a new president. The faculty representative on the Trustees' Committee was made to feel that he was a full member of the Committee at all times. In his efforts to keep the Committee informed of the opinions and feelings of the faculty, he was accorded every consideration and courtesy. Mr. Bush met frequently with the Faculty Committee, sometimes at its request, sometimes at his, and kept them fully informed of progress and of the activities of the Trustees' Committee.

"As the faculty representative I want to express my deep appreciation to all members of both committees with which I worked. I also want to thank the many who sent in names of persons to be considered for the presidency. All were given thoughtful consideration. Because of my participation in both Committees, I feel that it is not out of place for me to assure Dean Alden of the loyal cooperation and support of the faculty as he assumes his new duties as president of Ohio University."

VERNON ALDEN was born in Chicago, Illinois in 1923.

His father was a clergyman. The Alden family lived in Minnesota for five years; Vernon Alden was educated in the public schools of Moline, Illinois. He graduated from Classical High School in Providence, Rhode Island in 1941 and entered Brown University. There he did honors work in English Literature and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year. He was the first string second baseman on the varsity baseball team and a half-miler on the track team.

During World War II he served in the United States Navy from 1943 to 1946, aboard a minesweeper and a patrol ship in the Northern Pacific. He was sent to the Navy Japanese Language School in Boulder, Colorado, where he learned to read, write, and speak Japanese and was then assigned to the aircraft carrier, USS Saratoga. At the time of his release from the Navy, he was a lieutenant.

From 1946 to 1948, Dean Alden worked for President Henry M. Wriston at Brown, primarily in the area of college admissions. In 1950 he received his MBA degree from Harvard. After spending a year as Associate Director of Admissions at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, Dean Alden returned to the Harvard Business School where he served in several administrative and teaching roles until his appointment as Associate Dean in 1956. He received an honorary LL.D. degree in 1957 from Emerson College.

Mrs. Alden is the former Marion Frances Parson, a native of Chicago and a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University. The Aldens have three children—Robert, 8, Anne, 5, and James, 2. The Aldens live in Wellesley, Massachusetts.

Mr. Alden's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Alden, reside in Des Plains, Illinois. His brother, Donald, lives in

I AM DEEPLY grateful to the Board of Trustees and members of the faculty who have indicated their confidence in me by selecting me as President of Ohio University, a great university with 157 years of distinguished service to the state and to the nation.

Having already met and talked with many members of the Ohio University community I am impressed with their quality, their sincerity and their dedication. Under the leadership of President John Baker, high standards have been set and new levels of performance have been attained. One cannot visit this campus without sensing the feeling of expectation that even higher levels of accomplishment and service will be achieved. The essential elements exist for continued growth toward excellence.

This is a goal which requires full commitment and intensive work by all members of the Ohio University family—students, faculty, administration, the Board of Trustees, alumni and friends in Athens. Vitally needed, too, are the lively interest and support of the citizens of Ohio. We shall seek the help of able people wherever they are. To achieve our expectations, we need and invite the ideas and support of the many friends of Ohio University.

Engineering Looks To The Future

DEAN OF ENGINEERING E. J. TAYLOR, JR.

IN 1819, a course in surveying, developed along the most modern scientific lines of the day, provided the groundwork for the training of engineers at Ohio University. As engineering techniques developed, the University's program grew also, and in 1892, engineering became a full scale program.

Since that time the College of Engineering has been guided by the fantastic expansion of scientific knowledge, methods and research.

Today, with higher education at the "ground-zero" point of the world's scientific explosion, the College is taking positive steps to pattern its future after the increased demands of industry.

During the past year, a group of nine leaders from nationally-known organizations has met periodically to report on teaching, curricula and facilities in the Ohio University College of Engineering.

Known as the Board of Visitors for Engineering, the group was started at the recommendation of OU President John C. Baker. This June, the Board submitted its first annual report.

In the report, the Board describes the Ohio University engineering program as "fundamentally sound," but recommends several ingredients for future development. Some of the short range recommendations are:

1. A faculty committee should be appointed to study and make recommendations regarding expansion of the present eight semester program to ten semesters, possibly by means of summer schedules.

2. Means should be provided for faculty to attend more meetings of professional and scientific societies.

3. A vigorous program of expansion, recruitment and improvement of the engineering faculty, together with salary increases and leaves of absence for research should be launched, and the sabbatical year with full pay should be instituted.

4. Much needed equipment in the physics, electrical and mechanical engineering departments should be provided.

5. A research administrator reporting directly to the president should be appointed. This implies expansion of research in all areas including the College of Engineering and a vigorous promotion of its financing, as well as a reduction of teaching loads.

6. A committee of faculty and alumni should be set up to consider developing an Engineering Section within the framework of the Ohio University Alumni Association.

As a result of the last recommendation, the Alumni Association has set up a separate records system for engineering alumni.

Long-range plans submitted by the committee include what the group considers essential to keeping pace with the needs of the nation. Some of the recommendations are:

1. Expansion of the engineering graduate program toward establishing a Ph.D. curriculum in each area of the College of Engineering.

2. Consideration of granting the masters degree through work in the Ohio University branch colleges.

3. Development of a master plan for future expansion, to include the procurement of an adequate land site upon which to build a science and engineering center.

4. Additional buildings will be absolutely required in the near future to meet the needs of the College of Engineering.

In its report, the committee emphasized that the growth rate of technical employment, at 12 percent, is surpassing that of total employment, at two percent per year. From that, it concluded that expansion for the College of Engineering must proceed at a more rapid rate than has been contemplated previously.

The Board strongly insists, however, that the College must continue its emphasis on quality teaching and personal attention, no matter how rapid its expansion.

Longest Record in the State

With its history of engineering dating almost to its founding in 1804, Ohio University has the longest record of teaching engineering in the state. The initial impetus came from General Rufus Putnam, one of the University's founders, described by President George Washington as "the ablest officer in the Army."

Today degrees are offered in chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, including an industrial option in the latter department.

Although members of the faculty of the University have assisted the committee, the final recommendations are those of the members who have weighed facts in light of their own successful experiences as engineers, scientists and corporation executives.

Agreeing unanimously that "the engineer's quest for professional status is the recognition that engineering education must produce an end product of well rounded professional stature," the committee believes that liberal arts must not be sacrificed in the addition of new technical courses. On this belief, it bases its recommendation to consider expanding the eight-semester program.

Members of the committee are: John D. Coleman, superintendent of methods and materials utilization, Frigidaire Division, General Motors Corp., Dayton; Dr. Frank C. Croxton, technical director of Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus; Gordon W. Herrold, vice president of Anchor Hocking Glass Corp., Lancaster;

John L. Young, vice president, engineering technology, United States Steel Corp., Pittsburgh; and C. Paul Stocker, president of Lorain Products Corp., Lorain. Mr. Stocker, a trustee of the University is chairman of the committee.

After a year of study, the committee has become convinced that "if plans are formulated now and carried out in a long range program, Ohio University has an opportunity to become one of the great science and engineering centers of the future."

Ohio's governor provides some forceful answers to the question . . .

Why Can't the State Government

By The Hon. Michael V. DiSalle, Governor of Ohio

EVERY ONCE in a while someone asks the question, "Why can't the state government operate like a business?"

Well, first of all, we couldn't afford it. If we operated a state government like a business, most of the people who operate state government would be in jail. We certainly couldn't get the approval of expense accounts that are approved in business. The extravagance that exists in business the opposition party would never stand for in government. And although we keep hearing that certain parties are always interested in taxing and taxing and spending and spending, I have never noticed any great reduction in taxes or in spending, when one party leaves office and another party takes over.

This is a trend of the times. When we operate in a growing state with the responsibilities of government continuing to increase, and you combine with this actual growth the increase in cost operation that anyone in business is familiar with, what is there that will reverse the trend in a state such as Ohio?

Despite some similarities between government and business, there are major distinctions.

There are some similarities between government and business. In 1959 Ohio took over a corporation—a corporation with a great potential, a corporation with an expanding market, but a corporation whose physical plant was run down and one which lacked operating capital. This corporation over a period of years had exhausted its reserves, had borrowed and had used up the money it had borrowed. Its borrowing capacity was at an end because of certain limitations. But the responsibilities of this corporation did not cease.

This is one of the major distinctions between government and business, for business makes its own free choice as to whether or not it will go into an expansion program or whether or not it will defer its expansion program until its operating capital is ready to assume the new responsibility.

In government we do not have this choice. When September rolls around and 80,000 additional children ask for admission to the public schools of Ohio, we can't say, "Wait a year or wait two years until we are ready." We must be ready when they are ready.

In 1910, for example, in Ohio we had 5,000 students at our state universities. This year the figure is 76,000.

Continued growth in population brings added responsibilities to citizens of Ohio.

This isn't something that we have asked for; this isn't something that we just feel that we want to do, but this is something that is an obligation of the citizens of Ohio, and it has to be done. Although we are contemplating in the next two years an expenditure of $600 million for education, this certainly is not the end of that cost, because the end will only come when people stop having children. I have heard all kinds of rumors but I have never heard a rumor to that effect.

Ohio will continue to grow, and in this growth we are going to have problems. Growth means different things to different people. To an automobile dealer it may mean more prospective customers. To a home builder, it means more people who might buy homes; to a man who runs a supermarket, more customers; to a newspaper, a larger circulation.

But to a state it means more expense; more children to educate; more people with automobiles to use the highways and an expanded highway program. It means that more people will become wards of the state as far as the welfare programs are concerned.

Operate Like a Business?

GOVERNOR DiSALLE

Every time one hundred children are born in Ohio, three of them will be retarded to some degree; one will be mentally incompetent or emotionally disturbed; another one will become a delinquent; and all of them will have to be educated. Whenever a hundred children are born, we look forward to one hundred more incidents of increasing cost.

Those who tell of extravagance and waste are not telling the truth. They are indulging in the lowest and oldest form of demagoguery, for they are trying to say to the people of Ohio that "you are not mature enough to recognize the needs and the facts as they continue to exist."

Some persons say we are ruining our industrial climate.

We are doing the things that we must do! How many people realize that state government is at the very bottom of the totem pole as far as taxes are concerned? The federal government collects in the State of Ohio over $5 billion a year. Local governments collect in the neighborhood of one billion and a half million dollars a year, the state government $800 million in taxes.

A comparison of taxes indicates that the state is doing less than in the past.

There is a recent Kiplinger Letter comparing taxes across the country. Ohio, including state and local taxes, is forty-third out of the fifty states. The states that are below us are Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Illinois—and Illinois has just had a tax session which should push it ahead of Ohio, Virginia, Missouri, Delaware and Alaska.

As far as industrial climate is concerned, who can tell us in all honesty that Ohio's industrial climate is bad in the face of these figures? Is the state doing more than it did?

Actually, the state is doing less. Today the state is furnishing 30 per cent of the cost of public school education in the State of Ohio, whereas in 1947 the state was furnishing 45 per cent of the cost.

Ohio's state universities receive less tax money than any other comparable state in the country.

There are such things as economy and there are such things as foolhardiness. Anybody can save money. All he has to do is not fix his roof when it leaks, not fix a window when it's broken, not pay his doctor bills.

If someone is sick in the family, don't call a doctor. Then you can save money. But the result within a home would be chaotic, and within the state it leads to confusion. It leads to loss of morale among people who are trying to do the job. This is what we face and this is why I am so insistent and so earnest about seeing to it that we get a proper review of the state's needs and how we meet those needs.

What are we contributing to public school education in Ohio? Some $116 per capita, per child, per year. Of course that isn't very much but, when you start multiplying that by 2 million it runs into a lot of money. Ohio has the rather unenviable reputation of requesting the highest student fees for our state universities and furnishing the lowest amount of tax dollars of any comparable state in the country.

This is no way for Ohio to operate. In the name of human decency, we must never accept programs that are inadequate and not comparable to the needs of Ohio.

A City's Finest Hour

Citizens of Portsmouth carried out an extraordinary plan to provide quarters for a full-scale Ohio University branch college.

DAY-TIME BRANCH college students relax in the lounge of their new building. The lounge was furnished by the University.

U. S. SECRETARY OF COMMERCE Luther H. Hodges addressed a dedication banquet audience, climaxing the day-long observance in Portsmouth.

IN A DRAMATIC gesture that reflected the enthusiasm of a proud city, the entire front of a building was covered, then unveiled like a huge statue, as hundreds of citizens looked on.

It was Portsmouth's finest hour in education. The day was Sunday, September 24, the event the dedication of a new home for Ohio University — Portsmouth.

A parade of floats and bands led the citizenry to Griffin Hall, newly renovated by the city and furnished by the University for the beginning of a daytime program and the continuance of an evening branch.

In front of the building, city, University and U. S. government officials spoke. Behind the dedication was the driving spirit of a man for whom the building was named, and the determination of a community to assure its young people of the opportunity for higher education.

Significance of Portsmouth's campaign for more than $100,000 was reflected in a letter from President John F. Kennedy, calling it an answer to "what you can do for your country."

Speakers at the dedication were Dean Albert C. Gubitz and Ivan Nestingen, Undersecretary of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In the evening, U. S. Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges and Ohio University President John C. Baker spoke before more than 350 persons at a dedication banquet.

The drive that made this day possible was no ordinary fund campaign. Money came not from a few large contributors, but from the donations of men, women and children throughout the area. And it came during a period of serious economic deflation.

The tone of Portsmouth's drive was set in December 1960, when City Manager George T. Meholic described it as "a plan of action without compulsion, without the tapping of those who do not want to give."

Dean Guibitz had by then met with the College for Portsmouth Committee and it had decided that old Massie School, abandoned for some years, would be an ideal home for the branch college, if some $85,000 could be raised for renovation. The Ohio University Development Fund, Inc. at Portsmouth was given a charter on February, 1961, with the late N. B. Griffin, president.

Students in 14 area schools provided the initial impetus by voluntarily contributing an average of two dollars each. From there the drive accelerated. Companies, clubs, business and professional men and women, high school alumni groups, honor societies and individual citizens began adding to the fund.

Eric Brown, a 15-year-old newsboy walked into the home of Charles Baker, treasurer of the drive, and gave Mrs. Baker 10 one dollar bills from his earnings.

One women's club pledged $500, which it hoped to raise in the following six months. In three weeks it had the money.

You is They

Mike Segal, publicity chairman of the campaign, thinking of the many times he had heard complaints that "they ought to do this or that about education," came up with the improbable slogan, "You is They." It caught on, and soon it was being echoed throughout the area.

Several organizations not only gave money, but sponsored advertisements in the newspaper. Radio stations and newspapers carried the story to the citizens and contributed free advertising themselves.

By mid-March the drive, aimed at $85,000, reached instead $101,000. An amazing 95 percent of the total was in cash, with only a few thousand dollars remaining in pledges.

On March 18 the first contract for renovation of the building was let. More followed soon afterwards. Ralph Elliott, who had been part-time director of the evening operation, became full-time director in July.

Mr. Griffin, for whom the building has been named, died in August, after seeing a long-time dream materialize.

To many, the dedication represents Ohio's answer to college enrollment problems of the future. With the state at a crossroad in educational development, at which time it must decide its course for the future, the branch program appears to be a major answer to its needs.

Well tested by 14 years of successful operation, the branch college system is surging forward. In the fall of 1960 Ohio University opened its first daytime operation in Chillicothe, where classes are held in a church. Already, citizens of Chillicothe are looking to the future by purchasing land for branch buildings.

Griffin Hall in Portsmouth, however, is the first building operated exclusively for a daytime branch college.

All those who took part in the Portsmouth, Ohio, campaign have shared in the glory. Their building, with 10 classrooms, a beautiful lounge, and five modern offices can well be setting a pattern for the future. Many of them already are visualizing an entire campus of Ohio University at Portsmouth.

With 140 day and 500 evening students registered for the fall semester, they look to the future with confidence.

THREE PRESIDENTS, three acting presidents; four deans of education, two acting deans; ten directors, and four acting directors of the University Elementary School have served the University during the past 35 years. Many, many colleagues have come and gone; some stayed for long periods of time, others for shorter periods of time, but I have stayed on forever.

My first year, 1925, was the last year that the present Music Hall was used as the Laboratory School. My responsibility that year was to cooperate or "team teach" with the first and second grade critic teachers. This relieved each teacher for one-half day, the time to be used for conferences and the teaching of college classes.

In 1926 the new building at the foot of the hill on East Union Street, Rufus Putnam Hall or University Elementary School as now named, was ready for occupancy. From 1926 until 1958, with one year off to study for M.A. degree at Columbia University, my time was spent as supervising teacher in the first, second, and fourth grades at the University Elementary School.

From 1958 to the present time my responsibilities have involved the supervising of student teachers in the Athens and Marietta areas, including the teaching of the Student Teaching Seminar Class. Token visits have been made to the six branches and to Cleveland where our student teachers are working. The decision to give up the direct contact with children was difficult. I have found working with supervising teachers, student teachers, and indirectly with children, principals, and superintendents most worthwhile and rewarding.

During my thirty-two years at the University Elementary School with ten different directors and four acting directors, many changes in philosophies occurred. To survive these many, varied, and rapid changes one had to be adjustable, flexible, open-minded, and move as far as one's own philosophy would allow.

Our modern education evolved as a result of the interaction of both the traditional type of education and the more progressive point of view. Progressive Education today is simply education that attempts to apply in the educating of children the findings of research pointing to better and more effective ways of helping boys and girls develop their potentialities as individuals and become responsible and contributing members of society.

Techniques Return Under New Names

Over the years methods have been outmoded, techniques have been abandoned and materials have become obsolete only to return years later under new names. These have been memorable years of change and growth. Our University has grown as every one knows in the numbers of students admitted, increased numbers of faculty members, and in the huge building program that has been developing over the last sixteen years.

The University Elementary School was the only Ohio University building below the hill, until President Baker began his building program. What is now East Green was a mud hole, except for a few houses on either side of Union Street. The 104 steps leading to the building were a joy to the children to hop up and down—not so interesting for adults, however. The construction of the buildings on East Green and the new Education building proved to be a bonanza for our work at the University Elementary School, as despite the noise our curriculum was enriched by the observation of the machinery and building materials, and developed in us all the realization of our interdependence of all people.

Our one disappointment was the destruction of the large weeping willow tree. Fourth graders wrote to President Baker to see if it could be saved.

The razing of homes and favorite trees across from our school prompted Bill to express his feelings.

The barren wastes,
That once were something
Man had built, lived with,
And then tore down
To make way for another.
The old ones are shattered and burned,
To give out for the next in the chain
Only nature remains,
And soon that will be gone.

Bill Whan

Ironically, the only tree which was preserved, after many years of requesting its removal, was the mulberry tree between the University School and the new Education Building!

The University Elementary School continues to function in many areas for the welfare of the students not only in the College of Education but in other colleges of the University. It provides opportunities for observation and participation in every room.

Classes as well as individuals have taken advantage of this opportunity. Students, not only, in education courses but in music, art, physical education, industrial arts, psychology, home economics, economics, the sciences, guidance, speech, and journalism have availed themselves of these opportunities, numbering nearly three thousand visits per year.

A popular College of Education professor observes some trends in elementary teaching philosophies during the past 35 years.

Through the Years

These students not only observe, but participate in all phases of the curriculum. For example, science students help with experiments, explore, investigate, discover, and become aware of how the children use their findings to further their knowledge of the world about them. Others study how everyday economics concepts are understood and put to use, or help individual children who need special attention on some skill subject, or watch them teaching, or observe how the supervising teacher helps children to express themselves creatively.

Observations by Visitors

Working with these observers and visitors might often be considered time consuming, yet the benefits reaped by all concerned more than justified the effort. Visitors from city, state, nation and foreign lands have availed themselves of the opportunity to observe, participate and confer with teachers. Parents of the children have expressed their appreciation for the guidance and counseling provided for them and for their children.

One of the greatest innovations to be put into practice was the discontinuation of grades as such for the children. Parent conferences and the progress letter at the close of the year has proved most satisfactory. This progress letter is a compilation of the evaluation of the child's work by special teachers, student teachers, the children and the room teachers.

Student teachers were adequately cared for in the Athens, Mechanicsburg and The Plains schools until recent years. With over 600 student teachers per year they have had to be placed not only in the Athens area but in Nelsonville, Logan, Cleveland, Chillicothe, Zanesville, Portsmouth, Marietta, Waverly and Lancaster. These students are fortunate to be able to select the grade and area in which they prefer to teach. The supervising teacher, school staff and college supervisors guide the student to develop his own teaching personality.

Reflecting my experiences over these thirty-five years my concern for children, students, and student teachers has been (1) to create the type of human climate in the class

Bobcat

Roundup

By Rowland Congdon, '49

THE BUBBLE has burst." Those were Coach Bill Hess's words following his team's defeat to Kent State in the second game of the season, 23-17.

The loss brought to an end the Bobcats' 11-game winning streak and pointed out the truth in Hess's conjecture last spring that his personnel, especially in the backfield, could not come close to the performance of last year's group.

The 1960 Ohio College Coach of the Year envisioned that his 1961 team was going to be "hard pressed" to win another championship. "Every game is going to be close, with the breaks deciding the outcome", he insisted.

Through the first four games of 1961, this outlook has prevailed.

No game has been decided by more than six points. OU has defeated Toledo 10-6, and Dayton, 14-13, and lost to Kent, 23-17, and Xavier, 6-3, in the Homecoming game.

Obviously the Bobcats lack the scoring punch and breakaway running threats of last year's national small college champions. This can be proven with a quick perusal of the statistics.

Three of the Bobcats' five touchdowns to date have come on passing. The aerial game, not one of Hess's strongest offensive gestures usually, has netted 403 yards in four games for the Bobcats with junior quarterback Bob Babbitt of Bexley serving up 37 throws which have found the receivers 22 times for a fine .595 percentage. These have netted 292 yards and two touchdowns.

But, happily, the Bobcats have had none of 48 passes intercepted.

Mistakes have come in other departments, though. Especially fumbling. Last year's team fumbled 16 times and lost the ball eight. In the first three games this year, OU fumbled 10 times and lost seven. At least four of the times the opposition gained the ball from OU in this manner it was in the Bobcats' territory and resulted in a score.

Only in the Xavier game did the Bobcats not fumble.

The Bobcats have yet to gain as much as 200 yards on the ground in one game. In ten games last year, they failed to do this only twice. In three of last year's games, OU ground out more than 300 yards rushing.

So it is evident that touchdowns are proving harder to get in 1961.

Chief offensive threat to date has been the kicking game. Junior Jim McKee from Mariemont is carried on the club only as a placekicking specialist. He also plays baseball for the Bobcats.

Through the first four games the 6-3, 205-pounder has put his toe into three successful field goals and five extra point conversions. His 14 points by this means represents the team leadership in scoring.

McKee's toe was the difference in the Toledo game. He kicked a 22-yard field goal and converted a point after touchdown for the four-point margin of difference. Another kicker, Harl Evans, the only Bobcat who has punted this season, also assisted immeasurably in this game.

It was his punts in the rain-infested second half when offensive football was held to a minimum that helped turn the tide.

Against Kent, McKee kicked a 41-yard field goal and two extra point conversions. His extra point conversions won the Dayton game and he kicked a 30-yard field goal against Xavier.

Freshmen Win Opener

The Bobkittens, coached by last year's all-conference quarterback, Dave "Bucky" Wagner, looked impressive in their opening game win over Marshall at Huntington, W. Va., 30-8.

Some of the top performers for the freshmen were John Frick (6-2, 210, Tackle, Wyoming, O.), "Skip" Heovler (6-2, 212, Guard, Watkins Memorial), Tom Dyer (6-0, 175, End, Akron), Dave Robinson (6-3, 199, Halfback, Bellefontaine), Dick Austin (6-1, 195, Halfback, Cincinnati), Ron Clawson (5-11, 180, Halfback, Upper Arlington), Ron Curtis (6-0, 175, Halfback, Toledo), Jack Hite (6-0, 186, Fullback, Canton), Steve Gebe (5-10, 203, Fullback, Euclid), and Stu Schott (6-0, 180, Quarterback, Cincinnati).

Robinson ran a punt back 70 yards for a touchdown, aided by a couple of key blocks, and gained 34 yards in three rushing attempts. Clawson was most spectacular offensively with two touchdown runs of 18 and 13 yards, and a point after touchdown run, giving him 14 points on the night. In addition, he was the leading ground-gainer with 38 yards in five carries, and caught one pass for 30 yards.

Curtis carried the ball once and scored on a 14-yard jaunt around end. He also threw one pass and completed it for 30 yards.

Hite gained 33 yards on nine carries and Gebe 36 in eight tries. Schott complete three of eight passes for 44 yards.

The Bobkittens next outing was to be against Miami's Frosh at Athens. Miami lost their first two games to Dayton and Cincinnati.

Cross Country Runners Win Six

When Stan Huntsman was relieved of his football coaching duties to concentrate on developing the cross country and track teams, observers felt it would not be long until Ohio U. is heard from in these sports.

Already, OU is making the other conference schools worry about the Mid-American Conference cross country championships at Kent, November 4.

The Bobcat harriers have faced seven opponents to date and have been beaten by only one, last year's NCAA champions, Michigan State. That was in a triangular meet with Ohio State and the winners garnered 35 points to OU's 42 and Ohio State's 47.

All other opponents have fallen to Huntsman's young crew who compiled a 6-1 record so far. They were victorious in a four-team meet at Kent, getting 32 points to 34 for Pittsburgh, 76 for Bowling Green and 87 for Kent State.

They downed Central State, national small college champions last year, 23-35, in the first home meet. Central State had won 14 in a row. And then in their final home meet, the OU harriers defeated West Virginia, on Homecoming morning.

Akron and Cleveland boys dominate the roster. Ray Fleming, Akron junior, has been OU's top point-producer so far. He has been beaten only by Michigan State and Central State's top runners. Others showing well have been sophomores Darnell Mitchell of Cleveland and Bill Heller of Tallmadge. They have consistently followed Fleming across the finish line. Junior Carl Wells of Cuyahoga Falls has also gathered valuable points for the Bobcats.

Carl Swanson and Ray Palmer, both Cleveland juniors,

JOE NOSSEK became Ohio University's fifth All-American baseball player when he was given first team honors early last summer. Soon after he finished his junior year last June he signed a bonus contract of around $46,000 with the Minnesota Twins of the American League. He spent the rest of the year at Charlotte, N. C., but has been called up by the parent club for spring training. Nossek is enrolled for the fall semester at Ohio U. He is from Euclid and played outfield for the Bobcats.

have been the others consistently finishing high enough to get in the point-counting category.

Soccer Team Again Strong

John McComb's soccer squad won three of their first four games. After opening the season with a 4-0 loss to Pittsburgh, the booters downed Denison, 4-2; Kenyon, 2-0, and Ohio State, 3-0. Yet to be met were rough foes such as Slippery Rock, Pa., Teachers, Wilmington, Oberlin, Akron, Dayton and Michigan State, all considered better than average soccer schools.

The Bobcats soccer results do not count in Mid-American Conference competition since Ohio U. is the only league school to play the sport.

Competition by Classes

By Myron A. Hutcheson
Director, OU Fund, Inc.

COMPETITION is a key word in this year's Alumni & Friends Giving Campaign.

Each class will be competing against every other class for the highest number of donors. Class competition ranges from the class of 1892 through the class of 1961.

At the end of this year's campaign, the percentages of donors in each class will be published and the names of these contributors will also appear by class.

Ohio University is aiming for a total of 2500 donors for this 1961-62 year. Seven hundred and ninety contributed last year—which means OU needs 1710 new contributors and 790 repeat donors.

Each class will be represented by a "Class Agent" who has accepted the responsibility of leadership for the campaign in his specific class.

Bryan Heads Cleveland Volunteers

Clarence P. Bryan, '32, is the chairman of the Cleveland Campaign which will be a unique part of this year's Annual Alumni & Friends Giving Campaign.

Volunteers will cover the entire city and all suburbs within the Cuyahoga county boundaries. These volunteers will be explaining the need and importance of gifts to OU as they talk personally with alumni. Approximately 400 volunteers will be contacting 2700 alumni in that area.

"Doc" Bryan is the president of The Cuyahoga Savings Association. He is a community leader who backed urban renewal and rehabilitation projects in Cleveland. He has served on a number of civic committees analyzing the bond requirements of city and county. In addition to his community service projects, he is a member of the Shaker Heights Country Club and the Cleveland Athletic Club. Mrs. Bryan is the former Kathleen Conaway, '32. They have three children: Nancy, a graduate student at Smith College; Bill a senior at OU; and Betsy, a freshman at OU.

Jake Hits a Homer With "Hey, Little Ducky"

A FORMER ALL-AMERICAN outfielder and 1959 graduate of Ohio University is now combining his sports talent with song-writing.

Lamar Jacobs signed a professional baseball contract with the Minnesota Twins upon graduation and this past summer played with Syracuse of the International League and Indianapolis of the American Association before being recalled to the Twins for the final month of the American League season.

While with the Twins at spring training last March, "Jake" wrote what he calls a "gimmick" song which was subsequently published and released on an RCA Victor record label. It is named, "Hey, Little Ducky", with Sonny James doing the lyrics and "Jake" the duck talk.

So if "Jake" is unable to make sweet enough music with his bat in baseball, he can make it in the song-writing field.

WOUB Alumni Meet at Army Center

FOUR OHIO UNIVERSITY graduates who worked together at the university's radio station, WOUB-AM & FM, were together as Army Lieutenants in New York this past summer.

The four, Lieutenants Wesley B. Marshall, Terrence E. Leedom, Michael A. Dickerson and Douglas P. Sinsel, were assigned to the Army Pictorial Center, Long Island City, New York.

Two of the four are still with the Pictorial Center. Lt. Dickerson has been recently reassigned to Japan and Lt. Leedom to the 69th Signal Company (Photo) in Germany.

Lt. Marshall is chief of the Pictorial Center's Television Division Applications Development Office. In his position he investigates, evaluates and reports on new developments in the field of military and commercial television.

Lt. Sinsel is assigned to the Information Films Office. In his position he is responsible for troop information and education film production and for the Army's "The Big Picture," a weekly television series carried by over 318 American Television Stations.

Prior to being reassigned Lt. Dickerson was with the Television Division of the Center as a project officer and Lt. Leedom was with the Information Films Office.

PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION

room which would draw upon the untapped, unused potential of every student whether 5 or 65 years of age; (2) to encourage students to dig wide and deep for new knowledge; (3) to challenge and encourage students to feel that they must do their best to achieve something worthwhile and to have the desire to become —; (4) to help each and every one do self evaluating, i.e., to do their own thinking, to organize what they have learned and to use new ideas and new skills; (5) to keep pace with changing ideas, methods etc., but avoiding the use of too many gadgets, unnecessary teaching aids, etc., and keeping in mind the individual's readiness, interest and the "will to do" as the necessary qualities for effective learning.

We hear the claim that Russian technological developments have aroused an interest in quality education in our country, yet actually quality education has been a part of our philosophy during all these years. We have had every opportunity at Ohio University to foster this type of education — not only has there been opportunity, but we have been urged by the administration to keep all work on a high-quality basis.

It is difficult to express in words my deep appreciation for the challenging opportunities, the fine cooperation of co-workers and the administration, and the excellent working conditions in both the University Elementary School and the Education Building that has been afforded me these many years. I have deemed it a privilege having had the opportunity to be a part of this rapidly growing University. My only regret is that it is almost time to quit.
